[Percutaneous closure of iatrogenic arteriovenous fistulae]. During a 1.5 year period five patients with a total of 6 fistulae were referred to the Department of Angiology at the University of Aachen for treatment of iatrogenic arteriovenous fistulae (AV-F). Six fistulae had been created in order to treat extremity varices. Two iatrogenic fistulae (ASD) were associated with an associated aneurysm. Four iatrogenic fistulae (thrombosis) were initially considered to be a source of systemic thromboembolism and were found to be caused by compression of a graft. As an initial approach to patient therapy, we recommend optimal anticoagulation using low molecular weight heparin (LMWH) in combination with compression bandages, which provide high pressure on the fistula or graft. For occlusion of a shunt we prefer a monolayer snare to a non-crimped plug or a plug with a narrow waist, since they provide better mechanical stability and more reliable occlusion. In addition, we find snaring of aneurysm-related fistulae and compression of intact shunts with a snare to be therapeutic and prevent systemic thromboembolism. In this article we discuss the principles of management of iatrogenic AV-F. (NaturalNews) The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced today that it has discovered an "extremely rare" salmonella outbreak linked to a peanut and sausage manufacturer. The announcement came shortly after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said it also detected salmonella in samples from a Mississippi woman who died from salmonellosis on May 29. The FDA found salmonella, a common food-borne bacteria, in samples of bacon, ham, luncheon meat, soy-based meat substitutes, peanut butter and other products from King World Productions Inc. The agency has warned consumers to stop eating these products, and health officials are asking anyone with them to throw them away or return them to the place of purchase. The company has about 70 plants across the country and is one of the largest soybean and meat producers in the United States. King World's products -- which account for roughly 8 percent of all salmonella food poisoning cases in the U.S. -- is sold in 7,000 retail outlets nationwide
